

Summer Reading 2020

Don't forget to complete your summer reading before the first day of school! Each teacher will be incorporating these texts in their course assignments once the school year begins. Each grade and level will read both selections.

St Joes highly recommends that our entire community read All American Boys by Jason Reynolds and Brendan Kiely. Two high school students (one African American and one Caucasian) retell the story of the same event but through two different lens. All American Boys displays the different ways racism manifests itself in everyday life, explores the fundamental reasons that racism exists, and shows how it can be perpetuated even by those who do not mean to cause harm.

With input from our faculty, staff, and students, this book will act as springboard for much larger conversations and curriculum pieces that are being developed.

Each student at St Joes must read The Day the World Came to Town: 9/11 in Gander, Newfoundland for their required summer reading.

Through our shared reading experience, we will explore varied projects for each academic discipline, and come together as a community for shared discussion and activities.
